Dysart Transportation is finalist for prestigious Larson Award

DYSART SCHOOLS — The Dysart Transportation Department, led by director Bob Streeter, has reached phase three of consideration for the national Larson Award for Quality School Transportation.

The Leland E.G. Larson Quality Student Transportation Program is a sequence of comprehensive activities designed to serve as an assessment tool for pupil transportation professionals nationwide. The program measures the quality of pupil transportation operations, as well as identifies areas for improvement.

The selection process is a three-phase series, which includes an initial application, a live interview between the department and the program's peer review committee, and an unscheduled visit by the committee to the Transportation Department, where a full day is spent evaluating the district's transportation operation. The winner of this honorable award will be recognized at the annual National Association for Pupil Transportation (NAPT) Conference in 2012.
